Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

WINTERSMITH'S REMEDIES
FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS

The Courier-Journal.

VOLUME XXXI. NEW SERIES---NO. 9,117. LOUISVILLE, SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 16, 1893.---TWELVE PAGES. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

THE WEATHER.

Indications for Saturday and Sunday: Fair, preceded by light rain in the eastern portion; warmer; northerly winds, variable.

Two more accidents were added yesterday to the long list of horrors connected with Louisville bridges. The first occurred about 4 o'clock in the morning, and the second about 4 in the afternoon. The first was the more serious, involving the loss of a number of lives, and the second, though attended with great danger to those who were on the bridge at the time, resulted in the loss of only one life. The first accident was the falling of a span of the Jeffersonville bridge, and the second was the dropping of a span of the Kentucky bridge. The first accident was the result of the high wind that prevailed during the night, and the second was the result of the same wind, which had increased in force during the morning. The Jeffersonville bridge was not in use, and the Kentucky bridge was crowded with people, but the financial loss in the first case is much greater than in the second, and the number of persons injured is much greater in the second case than in the first. The first accident was the more startling, because it was unexpected, and because it occurred in the night, when the bridge was deserted. The second accident was not unexpected, because the bridge had been closed to travel for several days, and the danger was known to all who were on it. The first accident was the more startling,